

CONTRIBUTORS

Alex Antoniou's PhD focuses on the new criminal offence of possession of extreme pornographic images. He was awarded a Degree in Law by the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens in 2006 and studied journalism (PDipJ) in Athens too. In 2008, he completed his LLM in Media Law at The City Law School and he was awarded a Masters in Cultural and Creative Industries by King's College London a year later. He is also enrolled as an Advocate with the Athens Bar Association. Furthermore, Alex has worked as a Researcher for The Sorrell Foundation on the 'Designing Out Crime' project, which was undertaken in partnership with the Home Office, Design Against Crime Alliance and the Design Council. He also teaches Legal Method, English Legal System and Media Law. Finally, Alex has considerable conference participation and his research interests lie in obscenity legislation, pornography and free speech, as well as in sexual explicitness in print advertising.

Arpita Das is a social worker and researcher with interests in the areas of sexuality, gender, violence, intersexuality, and disability. She has an MA in Women's and Gender Studies from Europe and an MA in Social Work from India. Her professional experiences have included working on gender-based violence, LGBT rights, and sexual and reproductive rights in South and Southeast Asia. In her MA dissertation she attempted to understand, from a biopolitical perspective, how intersexuality is constructed within law and policy discourses; her most recent publication was a co-authored paper on the lesbian and gay rights movement in India. Currently she is based in India, working as a consultant on issues of gender-based violence, and sexuality education.

Isabelle Dussauge is a researcher at the Centre for Gender Research, Uppsala University. Her work deals with neuroscience, medicine's visual culture, historical relations between feminism and biology, as well as the early computerization of health care. Her current main project, 'Brain Desires', explores the neurosciences of sexuality and their cultural appeal.

Lena Eckert is assistant professor at the Media Faculty at Bauhaus-University Weimar in Germany. She received her PhD in Gender Studies from the University of Utrecht and studied and taught at Humboldt University in Berlin, Leeds University and Essex University. Lena's research interests are located in the areas of Gender Studies, Queer Theory, Post-colonial Studies, Anthropology, the History and Critique of Science, Gender-Media Studies, Psychoanalysis, Education, Anarchist Theory and the interconnections between these disciplines. She co-edited the online journal Liminalis. Journal for gender emancipation and resistance and the edited collection Bound and Unbound: Interdisciplinary Approaches to Genders and Sexualities (CSP 2008). Among her publications are 'Postanarchism and the contrasexual practices of the cyborg in dildotopia or "The War on the Phallus"' in Anarchism & Sexuality (Routledge 2011) and 'Intersexualization and queer anarchist future' in Queer Futures. Reconsidering Ethics, Activism, and the Political (Ashgate 2013).

Ayisigi Hale Gonel is currently doing research for the Encyclopaedia of Istanbul, having graduated with distinction from Istanbul Bilgi University for a dissertation on gendered name-bashing in high schools. Upon graduation, Gonel was admitted to Lund University where she recently received an MS in Social Studies of Gender. Interested in queer epistemologies, interdisciplinary queer methods, everyday formations of pansexual identity and historical queer texts, Gonel is currently working on homoerotic poetry and the underclass fetish in Ottoman Istanbul.

Michelle Hutchinson Grondin is a third year history PhD student at Western University Canada researching sexual education in Ontario during the 1960s and 1970s. Currently she is analyzing NFB sexual education films and their portrayal of sexual morality and gender norms. She has also contributed to the Canadian textbook Destinies and is a teaching assistant for a second year Canadian history course.

Freya Johnson Ross is an associate tutor and PhD candidate at the University of Sussex. Her research interests include social policy and sex education, post-structural, gender and feminist theory.

Annelies Kleinherenbrink is a PhD candidate at the Amsterdam School of Cultural Analysis, which is part of the University of Amsterdam in the Netherlands. She holds an MSc in Clinical Psychology and an MA in Comparative Women's Studies in Culture and Politics. Her research project focuses on possible connections and disconnections between feminist theory (with a focus on new feminist materialism) and scientific accounts of sexual difference (with a focus on evolutionary psychology and cognitive neuropsychology).

Ebtihal Mahadeen is a doctoral researcher at the Centre for Women's Studies in the University of York, UK. Ebtihal is interested in the intersection of gender, sexuality, and media studies from Arab and Islamic perspectives. Having recently submitted her thesis on representations of virginity in Jordanian online media, she is now working as a research consultant with the Arab Foundation for Freedoms and Equality and as a research fellow with the Council for British Research in the Levant. Ebtihal has organised the Arab Women, Media, and Sexuality international conference hosted by the Centre for Women's Studies in York in May 2012.

Agata Pacho completed her BA in Media and Sociology and her MA in Gender and Culture, both at Goldsmiths University of London. Currently, she is a PhD student in Sociology at Goldsmiths. Her research is looking at HIV care in Poland and the UK. Her project is funded by the Economic and Social Research Council. In addition, it received the Phil Strong Memorial Prize from the British Sociological Association. agatapacho@hotmail.com, website: <http://www.gold.ac.uk/csisp/members/goldsmiths-members/pachoagata/>

Ellen Zitani recently earned her PhD in Modern European History at the City University of New York Graduate Center. Currently she works as adjunct faculty in the Department of History at University of South Florida St Petersburg (USFSP).