

Contributors

Aakriti Kohli, an alumna of Delhi School of Economics and Tata Institute of Social Sciences, is an Assistant Professor at the University of Delhi, and teaches gender, media and cultural studies. Her documentary films also intersect with her research on identity and culture. Her paper has emerged from her thesis on Martial Masculinity in Punjab.

Damien Schumann is a photographer/filmmaker who is inspired by social issues and human justice. Considered a visual anthropological study, Schumann strives to produce pro-active work for advocacy, communications and social mobilization purposes. His work can be viewed at www.dspgallery.com.

Elan Justice Pavlinich is a presidential doctoral fellow at University of South Florida's Department of English, where he teaches feminist approaches to fairy tales and he writes about queer approaches to Old and Middle English literature.

Elzette Rousseau-Jemwa is a research psychologist currently supervising research at Midrand Graduate Institute/University and the Project & Study Coordinator at Desmond Tutu Foundation, University of Cape Town. Key research focus areas include Intimate Partner Violence; HIV; masculinity; sexual and reproductive health and rights (SRHR).

Gcobani Qambela is a graduate student working on masculinities, sexual and reproductive health. He teaches with Organization for Tropical Studies and Duke University, and works as a researcher on a multi-year MIT study. He cofounded Sakha Ingomso Lethu focusing on education outreach for youth in rural, township and peri-urban areas.

Kerryn Rehse holds a Master's degree in Social Policy & Management from the University of Cape Town. She has been working within the Gender-based Violence sector for the past 5 years and is currently coordinating the policy advocacy and communications for MOSAIC Training, Service & Healing Centre for Women.

Lynn Hendricks is a registered research psychologist currently working at the Centre for Evidence Based Medicine at Stellenbosch University in Cape Town. Other activities include Directorship of Research Ambition (Pty) and executive committee membership for the Division of Research and Methodology, Psychological Society of South Africa.

Maja Loncarevic is a social anthropologist and development practitioner with thematic focus on gender, human rights and health. She is specialized in the field of work with perpetrators. She has worked as the head of the thematic unit 'migration and health' at Swiss Red Cross, and program manager for Bosnia-Herzegovina at Swiss Development Cooperation. Currently she is responsible for Western Balkan programs at IAMANEH Switzerland.

Mia Eriksson holds a Ph.D. in Gender Studies and works as a lecturer in Gender Studies and Sociology at Linnaeus University in Växjö. She is also a poet and her chapbook A Day in the Woods will be released in the fall of 2016.

Michael Flood is an influential researcher on men, masculinities, and violence prevention. He is the lead editor of Engaging Men in Building Gender Equality (2015) and The International Encyclopedia of Men and Masculinities (2007). Dr Flood has had a wide-ranging involvement in education and advocacy.

Ranjini Krishnan is a doctoral student at Centre for the Study of Culture and Society, Bangalore. Her doctoral work tries to engage with the erotic economy of the intimate human exchanges. Her broad research interests include documenting and analyzing the interactions between sexual, cultural and the psychological in contemporary India. She can be contacted at ranjinilakshmi@gmail.com.

Roland Reisewitz is a social worker, perpetrator counsellor and president of agredis.ch, a specialized service for perpetrator counselling in Lucerne, Switzerland. He has several years of experience in counselling of violent youngsters and men, implementation of training programs for youngsters and adults, and training and development of perpetrator counselling services in the Western Balkan region.

Stephen Burrell is a postgraduate researcher in the School of Applied Social Sciences at Durham University, based in the Durham Centre for Research into Violence and Abuse. He would like to thank Professors Nicole Westmarland (Durham University) and Liisa Häikiö (University of Tampere) for their support with this research project.

Tal Peretz is an assistant professor of Sociology and Women's Studies at Auburn University, studying intersectionality and men's anti-sexist and anti-violence activism. He is the co-author of 'Some Men: Male Allies and the Movement to End Violence Against Women' (Oxford), with Michael Messner and Max Greenberg.